Belgrade, Serbia

The project „GenZ4GreenDeal – Generation Z for community development and sustainability“ aims to contribute to the fight against climate change by promoting active citizenship and young people’s participation in green initiatives.

This December took place the second project meeting in person. It was held in Belgrade, Serbia. During the meeting, important milestones were set and most importantly, the Handbook and the training materials were reviewed. At the moment, under the guidance of Ruse Chamber of Commerce and Industry, the consortium is developing seven learning materials. They are covering the following topics:

- Sustainable development
- SDGs and their importance
- The 3 pillars of sustainability
- What prevents sustainable development from happening?
- How are young people contributing to SDGs?
- Advocating green themes and policies
- Local actions for community development

With this learning course, the partners aim to encourage and empower young people to think green and to contribute to the resilience of their communities, to proposing innovative solutions, and to driving social progress and inspiring political change. The project will strive to provide the target group with the necessary skills and opportunities needed to reach their potential, in order for them to become a driving force for supporting development and contributing to peace and security.
